At lunchtime today, five employees from the Gadget Factory went out to do their banking. Though Millersville itself wasn't a large town, there were many options available in the surrounding area so it wasn't unusual that all five employees used different banks or credit unions. While all made deposits (and it wasn't even payday!), the odd part was that each made a deposit to a different type of account. Determine the full name of each employee, the name of the bank each went to (one was City Trust), the street each bank was on, and the type of account where each made their deposit (one was a CD).

- The employee whose last name was Lewis didn't have a savings account nor did she go to the Citizen Credit Union.
- Peter Bradley didn't go to a credit union. Harriet, whose last name wasn't Lawson, went to the bank on West Street but she didn't have a checking account.

- Elliot, whose last name wasn't Ranger, went to South Street to do his deposit but not at the Workforce Credit Union. The employee who went to the First National bank had a savings account.
- Fleet Bank was on Third Street but it wasn't Glenn's bank. Cindy, whose last name wasn't Sweet, had an IRA but it wasn't in the bank on Main Street.
- The two credit unions were the one on Rockland Street and the one that held an employee's money market account.
- The employee whose last name was Ranger didn't use a credit union to deposit money to his checking account. Harriet didn't have a money market account.

South opened one no trump rather than one heart simply because it gave the best description of his hand; the point count is right and he felt the hearts too threadbare to warrant an opening bid of one heart.

West led the jack of spades and declarer could count eleven tricks; three spades, one heart, four diamonds and three clubs. Some would attack this hand too quickly, playing top clubs at tricks two, three and four, then complaining, "How could I tell that clubs were four-two?"

The more astute declarers delay playing clubs until they have more information about how the suit might lie. After winning the king of spades, a low heart should be played from dummy. East wins the queen of hearts and returns a spade. On this layout when declarer takes the king and queen of spades he discovers that West began with a five-card suit there. Next, the ace of hearts exposes West's singleton heart. The penultimate step is to cash four rounds of diamonds, discarding hearts from hand. When West discards a spade on the fourth diamond his original distribution, 5=1=3=4, becomes public knowledge.

So declarer cashes the ace and queen of clubs and then finesses West's known jack of clubs for his twelfth trick.

Of course, if West had shown up with four diamonds he would have begun with 5=1=4=3 distribution and would arrive at the same result as the original South player.

And finally, if East had shown up with an original distribution of 2=5=2=4, he would have been squeezed on the run of the spades and diamonds.

(See top of next column.)

After a simple auction with a long-suit game try of three clubs, asking for help in that suit, West sensibly led a trump in an effort to protect his potential club tricks from being ruffed away.

There were nine top tricks and without a trump lead the play would be straightforward. For example on a heart lead, declarer takes his three red suit winners before playing ace and another club. The defence returns a trump, wins in hand and South plays a third club. No matter what the defence does he ensures his tenth trick by ruffing his last club with dummy's jack of trumps.

The average player might not find a plan to make a tenth trick after a trump lead, but it is simple to do so once you have seen this type of deal before. The important thing for declarer to recognise is that he is unlikely to be able to ruff a club in dummy – the trump lead suggests either a pathological delight in leading trumps or, more probably, some fear that clubs may be ruffed in dummy.

What can be done? Well the idea is to score as many trumps as possible! So, with this in mind, declarer cashes the ace and king of hearts at trick two then plays a diamond to the ace to ruff dummy's remaining heart with the ace. A diamond play follows.

Suppose West wins the second diamond and exits with another trump. South wins with dummy's nine and ruffs a diamond. After a club to the ace and another diamond ruff, declarer has made five trumps in hand, two heart tricks, the minor suit aces and there is still the good jack of trumps in dummy to make his the tenth trick on a dummy reversal.

This is a simple hand with a theme that has been around for years. All it requires is a little care on declarer's part in keeping track of his potential tricks during the play... and acting on the result.

West leads the unbid suit of course, choosing the ten of clubs. After winning the trick with dummy's ace of clubs, declarer calls for dummy's queen of diamonds. East takes this with the king of diamonds and finds the menacing shift of the nine of hearts. South plays the jack of hearts from hand but his luck is out when West covers it with the queen.

After winning the trick with the king of hearts, South will regret playing a second diamond immediately. East will win the trick with the ace and continue the attack on hearts. No matter when declarer takes his ace of hearts, he has only seven tricks before East gains the lead to defeat the contract; the defence takes a spade, two hearts and two diamonds for a one trick set.

If declarer counts his tricks before leading the second diamond, he should be able to avoid this fate. As he has only seven immediate tricks if he plays second diamond, he should realize that he needs two tricks from the black suits before he knocks out the ace of diamonds. As a result, his next move should be to play the queen of spades to the closed hand's king.

It does East no good to play the ace of spades on this trick for then declarer makes four spades, three clubs and two hearts. What happens when the king of spades holds? The answer is that South cashes a top club, discarding a heart from dummy, and only now plays a second diamond. He scores a spade, two clubs, two hearts and four diamonds for nine tricks.

Being a bridge book and magazine collector can sometimes have advantages. For example, recently I came across this deal in a newly-acquired bridge magazine from 1938 published on the US West Coast. It was a double dummy puzzle for readers to solve once West led the king of diamonds.

The solution was held over to the next month and alas I do not have the relevant magazine – well, yet anyway. However, the answer must surely have been to duck the opening lead! When West leads a second diamond declarer can arrange a diamond ruff. On the other hand a trump shift does the defence no good for declarer can win, draw trumps, unblock the ace of hearts and use the ace of diamonds as an entry to the king of hearts, on which declarer's remaining diamond will disappear.

If instead declarer takes the ace of diamonds at trick one the defenders can prevent him ruffing a diamond and from ever seeing dummy again! Consequently, he finishes a trick short of his contract.

Ladies who "bridge"
And Ladies who "lunch"
Play by the odds,
Or play by the "hunch!"

Give 'em a bubbly,
Give 'em a munch,
And they will become
A really fun bunch!

The rotation of the earth really makes my day!

My wife told me to stop imitating a flamingo... I had to put my foot down!

So what if I don't know what "Armageddon" means? It's not the end of the world.

WISCONSIN TRIVIA... Source: Movoto.com

1. Mount Horeb is full of trolls, but not the online hater kind. The town's main street, dubbed the "Trollway," is lined with hand-carved wooden ones.
2. Wisconsin is the only state to offer a Master Cheesemaker program. It takes three years to complete, and you need 10 years of cheese making experience before you can even apply as a candidate.
3. The cheesehead hat actually debuted at a Brewers, not a Packers, game. It was popularized by Brewers outfielder Rick Manning when a dugout photo of him wearing the now-iconic wedge appeared in the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel.
4. Wisconsin was the first to institute a statewide income tax. Thanks a bunch, guys.
5. A record-breaking 209,376 bratwursts were consumed in 2010 at Madison's Brat Fest.
6. Wisconsin repealed its laws enforcing Prohibition in 1929, four years before the nation as a whole.
7. In fact, the 21st Amendment, which did away with Prohibition nationwide, was authored by Wisconsin senator John J. Blaine.
8. Schlitz, the "beer that made Milwaukee famous," is now owned by the Los Angeles-based Pabst Brewing Company, which also produces Old Milwaukee.
9. The Wisconsin State Cow Chip Throw Festival, held in Sauk City and Prairie du Sac, is the world's largest celebration of bovine fecal matter.
10. Barbie, the improbably proportioned doll of a million career and wardrobe changes, comes from the (fictional) town of Willows, Wisconsin.
11. The "terrible towel" waved by Pittsburgh Steelers fans is actually manufactured by McArthur Towel and Sports of Baraboo.
12. The first-ever ice cream sundae was served (on a Sunday) in 1881 at Edward C. Berner's soda fountain in Two Rivers, and it only cost a nickel.
13. The University of Wisconsin-Madison fight song, "On Wisconsin!" is also the state song, although the lyrics differ slightly.
14. The Iron Brigade, the bulk of which was made up of members of the 2nd, 6th and 7th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry regiments, suffered the highest percentage of casualties of any brigade in the Civil War.
15. This song was originally written about the state of Minnesota, but was later changed to be about its next-door neighbor,
16. The battle cry "On Wisconsin!" was first uttered at the Civil War Battle of Missionary Ridge by then-lieutenant Arthur MacArthur, Jr., whose future little boy Dougie would grow up to be five-star General Douglas MacArthur.
17. Confederate spy Belle Boyd, known as the "Secesh Cleopatra," was a Virginian by birth and loyalty, but she's become a posthumous Unionist as she died and lies buried in Wisconsin Dells.
18. Door County takes its name from a dangerous sea passage where the waters of Green Bay join those of Lake Michigan—early French explorers named it the Porte des Morts, or Death's Door.
19. A Milwaukee newspaper editor and printer created the QWERTY keyboard.
20. During the summertime, the population of Door County explodes, reaching almost 10 times the number of year-round residents.
21. The Wisconsin Dells has the world's largest concentration of water parks all in one area: eight indoor and three outdoor, with more than 200 water slides and 16 million gallons of water.
22. The Noah's Ark Waterpark in the Dells is the largest outdoor water park in the U.S.
23. Milwaukee's Summerfest attracts up to a million visitors per year, which has earned it a Guinness World Records citation as world's largest music festival.
24. The Infinity Room at the House on the Rock in Spring Green has 3,264 windows.
25. Another monster critter, an enormous statue of a badger, once sat atop a Birnamwood gas station/gift store that was housed in his "log." The badger's got a new gig now—he's welcoming patrons to see the nekkid ladies at the Northern Exposure Gentlemen's Club.
26. The first kindergarten classes in the U.S. were held in 1856 at the home of a German couple residing in Watertown.
27. A sign that used to mark the Business 51 exit on southbound I-39 managed to misspell every single word except for "exit." Rothschild came out as "Rothschild," Schofield was "Schofeild," and the sign makers even managed to mess up the word "business"—"Buisness"? Seriously?

28. Wisconsin produces more cheese than any other state in the nation. And no, this does not include those foam cheesehead hats worn by Packers fans.

29. About 90 percent of the milk from Wisconsin cows is used to make cheese.

30. The National Freshwater Fishing Hall in Hayward is home to what is claimed to be the world's largest fiberglass sculpture, a four story high, 143 feet long muskie complete with an observation platform in its gaping mouth.

31. Chalet Cheese Cooperative in Monroe is one of only two U.S. companies still producing Limburger, the world's stinkiest cheese.

32. The giant muskie also contains a memorial to Herman, a 16 1/2" night crawler who appeared on the "Tonight Show" and "Late Night with David Letterman." Not only was Herman telegenic, but he was also able to paint using his entire body as a brush and to shoot a tiny basketball.

33. Celebrity cheeseheads include Lil Wayne, Larry the Cable Guy and Big Papi David Ortiz.

34. The city of Rhinelander has its own mythical beastie, the Hodag, which is a sort of horned frog thing. A captive Hodag was exhibited at the Oneida County fair, but sadly was revealed to be a hoax.

35. Wisconsin Statute 97.18, aka the "oleomargarine regulations" is, despite a 2011 attempt at repeal, still in place to guard dairy staters against the evils of having margarine masquerade as real butter. It's against the law to substitute margarine for butter in a restaurant unless the customer requests it, and even the margarine sold in grocery stores must be colored in a certain way so as to make sure it doesn't resemble butter too closely.

36. Wisconsin even champions domestic non-dairy-related agriculture, as this statute also forbids the use of imported oil in the production of margarine.

37. Wisconsin's rivers and streams, if laid end-to-end, would stretch for 26,767 miles, which is almost 2,000 miles more than the circumference of the earth.

38. The world's largest soup festival was at one time used to prepare soup for Laona's annual Community Soup festival. While the festival's still goes on, and the kettle's still standing, it has retired from the soup business.

39. Marathon County produces nearly all of the ginseng grown in the U.S.—about 10 percent of the world's total supply.

40. Wisconsin has more dairy cattle per square mile than any other state and ranks second behind only California in milk production.
